Mr. S. W. Sweeney was then introduced and took eccasion to say that he had suffered for his principles, and that only within the past week. He held a $900 position in the interior department, and because he refused to pay an assessment of $18 to a radical exampaign fund he had been discharged. His official scalar was now hanging at the belt of some stalwart republican, but next March W. S. Hancock would see that he was reinstated.

Short addresses were then made by Mr. Campbell Carrington and Dr. Charles Allen, the latter being cut short by a sudden fall of rain. This liquid being new to the average democrat, broke up the meeting, as the crowd scampered off, having heard enough of Hancock and English.

"You had no right," said the general, gruffly, closed his remarks and introduced Mr. W. P. Bell, siyling him the "young Cleero of the democracy." Mr. Bell said he was not a talker, but a worker; that for the pass twenty years the country had been misrepresented by one party, but now the time for a change had arrived. He favored onsting the present office-holders and putting new men in their places. Speaking of the action of the readjusters in Virginia he said it was a mighty bad stark, and showed that the democracy would have to work hard to conciliate even its own friends.

Mr. P. J. Donoho followed, and started out with the declaration that Hancock had already in his pocket the 128 electoral votes of the general, but at last became angry. "General Hancock," said he, "you think you are dealing with a country preacher who has no friends. I am probably as well known here and in Washington as you are, and all I have to ask of you is that you make your declaion one way or the other without dulay. It's an outrage to allow those rebels to try to capture our church in the very presence of our troops, and I give you warning, if you decide for them. I will have your declaion reversed over your head." With this he stalked out of the your head." With this he stalked out of the

A Mother and Son Under Arrest. Rachel Breome and her son, Henry Broome, were arrested yesterday afternoon on several warrants sworn out by Charles Spencer. Mrs. Broome and Henry are charged with assaulting Spencer last Wednesday, and Henry Broome is charged with assault and battery with intent to kill Spencer on the 5th instant. On the last-named occasion Spencer alleges that young Broome shot at him on a cellar on C street, between Thirteenth and Thirteennad-a-half streets. The troubles between the Broomes and Spencer arose out of some business relations. Sponcer, it appears, bought a restaurant from Broome near Mrs. Broome's house, corner of Thirteen-and-a-half and C streets. Not having paid down the full amount Broome, assisted by his mother, attempted to gain possession and Spencer resisted. There were several skirmishes between the parties. A workman with a lighted caudle was searching under the flooring of the second story for a suspected leak in the gas-pipes. The lask was soon discovered, for when the man came near it he was immediately notified by the explosion. He was uninjured, but considerable damage was done to the ceiling and to the goods stored underneath.

-At the regular meeting of the Columbia Boat club last Saturday evening the limit of 150 active members was reached; the building committee reported that the house would be ready for occupancy by the 16th instant, but would not be fluished before the 1st proxime. The capitaln directed the rewing members to provide themselves with uniforms with as little delay as possible. It is only three months since this club was organized, and we think they descrive great credit for the promptness and energy displayed in managing their affairs. The boat house even now re-flects groat credit to the club and also to Mesors Davidson & Co., the builders.

Care of United States Prisoners. Care of United States Prisoners.

The department of justice has under consideration the subject of the custody of United States prisoners in the different prisons belonging to the states. Until about four years ago the sum paid for the care and custody of offenders souteneed by United States courts to imprisonment was $1.25 per day per capits. About that time the assent of the government was given that these prisoners he set at work About that time the assent of the government was given that these prisoners be set at work under the contract system, it being then believed, as has subsequently been proved, that it was better that prisoners should be at work than kept in idleness. Aside from effecting a large saving to the government, it has been found that the health and morals of the prisoner are improved by this system and he is taught a trade by which he can support himself by honest labor after the expiration of his term. Under the new arrangements the cost of maintenance has been reduced, until now the maintenance has been reduced, until now the the government is paying but from twenty to twenty-five cents per day for the keeping of its prisoners, exclusive of the cost of transportation from the place of conviction to the peutentiary or prison. As this involves the cost of guards to and returning from the prison the item is a considerable one. Under the contract system many of the positentiaries have become not only self-sustaining, but a source of revenue to the state, the profits at Sing Sing pricon in May being eleven per cent, upon the mouth's expenses. Hence the government convicts are sought after, and it is said the Auburn prison management has offered to take them without remuneration, and even to pay for their transportation and custody from Washington to that place. The legislature of Maryland last session amended its laws so as ge Heenses have been issued to to enable it to compete for the custody of pris prison authorities have as yet put in no forma proposition. It is probable that the govern-men, ewing to competition, will have no diffi-culty in securing contracts, by which the labor of the convicts will be accepted as an offset for their keeping, which will effect quite a saving to the revenues. There are at this > pentientiary, 125 at Alleghany, Fa., prison, 300 at Detroit, Mich., and many others at different places of confinement. Trade With Italy. The consul of the United States at Naples, in a recent dispatch to the department of state commenting on American trade with the Med-iterranean, laments that the American flag is rarely seen in that region. Only four American vessels arrived at Naples during 1879 But this is not indicative of American trade. of which there is a great deal, but not to the extent it should be. Foreign vessels are con-tinually employed carrying American pro-ducts. The English Anchor line has been runducis. The English Anchor line has been run-ning from New York to the Meditorraneau successfully for years. Florio, the well-known Italian ship owner, has recently started a regu-lar line between the principal ports of Italy and New York and is having several first-class 4,000-ton steamers built for the purpose. At Naples last year 1,700,000 bushels of American Napies last year 1,700,000 hushels of American grain were imported. The failure of the Italian grain crops had much to do with this, Maize is becoming an important article of im-portation. American canned goods are also in portation. American canned goods are about demand, Our improved agricultural machinery is being largely introduced.
